Solo travelling

I like travelling alone. I have visited many places, such as Thailand, Europe, South America and the USA on my own, which was a great challenge. Every time I travel solo I 32_____ myself of how strong I am. Travelling with others, you tend to rely on different people for different things. For example, Joe handles the map because he's good 33_____ navigation, while Jennifer deals with the arguments because she's an excellent problem solver. When you're travelling by yourself, only you're 34_____ for it all: reading the map, navigating local transportation, communicating through language barriers to order food or a bus ticket, and any other travel situation.

Solo travelling also developed my communication skills. I think I truly reached my full socializing potential when I was travelling alone in Europe. I can 35_____ that European culture is extremely social in itself. Suddenly, people were coming up and starting conversations with me in money exchanges, train stations, parks, buses, piazzas, hostels. As I got used to the European culture, I began initiating conversations myself. I still 36_____ in touch with most of the friends I made on that trip. They are very kind and helpful people. 37_____. I realized how easy it was to make friends once you came out of your shell. These communication skills have helped me to 38_____ in work, friendship and relationships.
